Chair's Message

by Michael Moore, PMS Chair

THANK YOU, THANK YOU, THANK YOU

Putting on the XI FINA World Masters Championships was a great undertaking. Six months after the end of the championships, we are still wrapping up all the things that needed to be completed.

There were hundreds of people who worked on the Championships. I would like to take some time to acknowledge a few of those people.

Anne Warner Cribbs of the Bay Area Sports Organizing Committee was our executive director. She was instrumental in working with Stanford University, the National Governing Bodies and FINA. And then there was meet registration, letters of invitation and tons of work; as well as having the best Rolodex in the Bay area

Nancy Ridout (Tamalpais Masters), our Pacific Masters Registrar is also a member of the FINA Masters Committee. Besides being the secretary of the Organizing Committee. She was responsible for much of the paper work. Nancy was instrumental in designing the meet medals - the best-looking Worlds medals - ever.

Barry Fasbender (Stanford Masters) was a member of the Organizing Committee. Barry was also in charge of the Swimming championships. The Swimming championships had over 5500 athletes competing in the largest swim meet that United States Masters Swimming has ever had. One day there were over 4,000 swimmers competing at the Stanford venue. He was also in charge of a day of relays, where there were over 1400 relay teams to be seeded the night before.

Barbara Thomas (Loch Ness Masters) was the treasurer of the Organizing Committee. She took care of the books and worked on the reports to US Masters Swimming.

Bill Grohe (USF Masters) worked on marketing. He was also instrumental in distributing the medals and awards. I thought we would only need one person working to pass out the medals, but he got four of his USF teammates to help distribute the medals and they were kept busy all the time.

Jon Steiner (Tamalpais Masters) reviewed the contracts of the Organizing Committee and worked hard to be sure that agreements were on a business like basis. Everyone who saw the Tam relay that Jon anchored will remember that race. We will miss Jon.

Jody Smith (Stanford Masters and Stanford University) is the aquatic supervisor at Stanford. She went out of her way to be sure that Stanford's world class facilities were always in a world class condition. She gave guidance for the meet that helped us tremendously.

Kerry O'Brien and Walnut Creek Masters filled all the timing chairs on Monday of the meet. On Tuesday Walnut Creek entered one hundred relays - Kerry and the other Walnut Creek coaches were kept very busy organizing their relays.

Phyllis Quinn (The Olympic Club), Linda Gilchrest, Paul White (Alameda Aquatic Masters) and the rest of the Open Water Committee, worked very hard with the Open Water Committee to produce one of the best open water Courses in the Masters Championships history. She found warm open water in San Francisco bay where a great course could be located.

John Klimp (Stanford Masters) helped Barry organize the swimming volunteers. On any given day there were about 100 volunteer positions to fill, then train. John organized the volunteers.

With thousands of people from 74 different nations coming to the championships, Ilsa Byrnes (USF Masters) with ability to speak four languages helped direct the swimmers to the correct line.

Phil Bowen and Rich Cacciso took hours of video. Joe Spohn took the film and made a four-minute tape that gives a great feel for the meet.

Announcer Mark Gill (Kentucky Masters) created drama and excitement. He was able to point out great Masters swimmers, extraordinary performances, and when records seemed on the verge of being broken. With 165 swimming records surpassed at Stanford; he was very busy.

Ed Ruth of USA Swimming was the meet referee and along with Bob Brown, Rick Beebe and Jacki Allender did a great job of taking care of the paperwork. I thought only one admin referee would be needed but we had three championships referees and they were kept working the entire time they were there - lunch on the job.

Laura Colette and Kris Nergaard who transported the FINA officials. Besides doing the transporting, Kris also announced and Laura worked in accreditation.

Larry Rice, Jacque and Dean Dillingham were in charge of the timing systems. With thousands of splashes to keep track of, these professionals made sure that the timing equipment worked well and that the all swimmers got their times and splits.

We had hundreds of volunteers who worked at the meet and without those volunteers the meet could not have taken place. To all the volunteers, it was your help and work that made the championships work. "Thank you!"

Descent into the Maelstrom

By Rick Meyerhoff

OK...I know that Edgar Allen Poe penned a story of the same name. My experience with the Maelstrom was twofold - watching the young bucks in the men's 50 meter freestyle at the Worlds Masters Championships and the emotional drama I experienced as I made my first foray into international competition.

I'm a sprinter, and though fast approaching sixty, still have a lot of gas in the tank. I approached my training with the diligence and verve only a sprinter can muster. Always ready with a comment of irreverence, careful not to alienate my coach, and just lazy enough to gain the affections of my elder teammates in the lane.

Along the way, I gained something that I hadn't anticipated - the friendship and camaraderie of my teammates. As we trained for the championships, we forged a bond, and that bond was family. The kind that follows a common goal, a love of the game, and a deep appreciation for what each teammate was trying to accomplish.

So I found myself at Stanford to compete in the World Championships with almost 6,000 swimmers from around the world. I was excited. My first event was one of my favorites, the 50 fly.

I decided to swim without goggles. I can't keep them on when I dive. I had already come to grips with my anxiety attacks so I didn't need something else to worry about.

Thus, on Saturday, I began my unexpected descent into the maelstrom that lay in wait for me. I had a great start in the 50 fly, and good stroke turnover. But when I approached the finish, I couldn't see the wall.

It was late afternoon, and the walls and touch pads were in the shadows. I decided to coast in. Big mistake! It took forever. When I finally touched the wall, I knew I had blown whatever chances I had to get a good time.

My second event was the next day, the 100 meter free. When I took off from the blocks in my new and first ever speed suit, my new goggles filled up with water - one lense at a time.

Apparently, turns are not my forte. To the aghast of my teammates, who were right there at the bulkhead, I went in ahead and came out behind. As I ran out of gas the last 15 meters, I couldn't see the end of the pool.

Remembering the day before, I tried to finish strong. This time I took that extra stroke and slammed my hand into the touch pad, jamming my index finger. It still hurt a couple of weeks later.

So, there I was, after two events, nursing my wounds, dealing with the demons, and my pride and index finger suffering. But, I wasn't going to get discouraged.

The third day, Monday, I had my two final individual events. The 50 meter free and the 100 meter fly. The 50 wasn't anything to write home about.

My final individual event was the 100 fly, and I was ready. I knew that the last few meters of the 100 would be tough (I had never swum it before). I was bringing it back home strong and relaxed, when the piano dropped on me. 15 meters from the finish was the beginning of the end. Telephone poleing as it were, I struggled to finish. I can now lay claim to my friends that I am 20th in the world (of 25 entered).

I had been scratched from a couple of high performance relays, and substituted into a couple of slower ones. But it was no big deal because one of our swimmers showed us what it was all about; he had been recently diagnosed with lung cancer.

Jon Steiner, who has made many contributions to the Pacific Masters program, took off the nasal cannula that continually fed him oxygen and swam a superb 50 meter anchor leg. To watch him swim that anchor leg, with courage, tenacity and verve, put what we were doing into perspective. The odds he faced were more important than anything that anybody was doing that day, or the days ahead.

But, woe to me, there were no more places to hide. I was entered into the big boys relay as the butterfly leg of the 240 medley relay.

One of our swimmers, Dick Thomas, put it to me gently; the rest of the guys were counting on me to put in a stellar performance.

Sitting in the marshalling area with Rich Burns (world record holder), back; Ken Frost (former world record holder) breast; yours truly; and Dick Thomas (national record holder), free, I didn't want to let the guys down. Dick, the great motivator, said that if we could find a way to cut off two seconds, we could break the world record. Two seconds indeed!

Rich got off well, with a lead in backstroke. Then, Ken powered down the lane toward me breaststroke. I got a good rolling relay start and everything seemed to fall into place, effortlessly. I hit the wall without incident and Dick took off. All I could see was him and the Olympic Club's swimmer racing neck and neck down the lane line, churning up the water.

Rich Burns and I were still in the water when Dick hit the wall. Rich looked up at the clock, turned to me and said, "We broke the world record." I couldn't believe it.

At the end of the relay, after all the commotion had died down, I went over to the side and just broke down. All my demons had been exorcised, and I could look my teammates and coach in the eye, knowing that I had not let them down. A burden had been lifted from my psyche. Both Ken and I had dropped our times by a second.

As I climbed out of the pool and the maelstrom I had faced, with that final performance, I did so with the realization that one should never give up. Keep trying. Do the best you can, because you never know what rewards lay in store.

Every year, Pacific Masters recognizes the outstanding coach of the year. Coaches are important and we need to recognize them. Many times coaches are there for their swimmers in ways they had not foreseen. For Masters coaches, this aspect can carry over beyond swimming, and in to the things that make an adult swimmer's life in the pool more difficult and challenging than coaching age group swimmers: injuries, illness and even death, divorce, job issues and family issues. And through it all, rain or shine, in shorts or rain gear, the coaches are always there!

Take some time to think about whether your coach would qualify for this award. We are fortunate in our LMSC, because there are so many terrific and caring coaches that love swimming and Masters swimmers, so that receiving this award makes it a true honor for the recipient. It is time again to honor the Coach of the Year.

Nominations: Nominations may be made by any registered Pacific Masters club officer, in a written statement setting out how their nominee meets these qualifications, as well as the instructional and inspirational qualities of the coach. This nomination also needs supporting letters from up to four registered Pacific swimmers. Send these materials by March 21, 2007 to Michael Moore (by email at chairman@pacificmasters.org or by mail to 350 Wayland, San Francisco, CA 94134.
